(ii) Restructuring of Banks in India;

(iii) Profitability and Profit Planning in Banks;

(iv) Problems of Recovery and Mounting overdues in banks; and

(v) Long Range Planning in Banks.

A number of suggestions emerged as a result of these discussions relating to the above topics such as on: fixation of interest rates on bank deposits, valuation of securities, etc.—the issue of restructuring on which the consonsus was that in the present context this should mean modifying the internal structure of existing banks with a view to improving efficiency on the need for better cash and Investment management, careful planning of non-performing assets, economies in expenditure, diversification of bank business etc. in relation to profit planning—the need for strengthening of field level recovery machinery of banks, joint responsibility of Government and need for simplification of procedures and effective legislative measures for loan recoveries and on the need for long range planning to be itroduced by all banks.
